Kentucky is planning to redesign and enhance a comprehensive System of Care for children with serious emotional disturbance (SED) and their families in three rural Appalachian regions of Eastern Kentucky. Building on a strong interagency infrastructure known as Kentucky Impact, including State and Regional Interagency Councils, the program will address children's needs via a family-focused, culturally competent, flexibly funded, community-based and accountable System of Care. A major expansion of the System of Care will take place in partnership with local schools, where Student Service Teams (SSTs) will develop, implement and coordinate a spectrum of services through existing Family Resource and Youth Service Centers. During the first grant year, SSTs will be established at a total of eight schools, including elementary, middle and high schools. Each SST will employ three key staff: 1) a Student Service Coordinator; 2) a Family Liaison; and 3) an Intervention Specialist. Together, these staff will ensure that children with SED are appropriately identified, and individualized services are planned and provided for/with those children and their families in cooperation with professionals from mental health, education, child welfare, health, juvenile justice, substance abuse, and other community resources.

KPFC staff, board, and family membership, including youth, will participate in strategic planning, develop increased leadership and management skills, and promote more effective collaboration with professionals, policy makers and community leaders. The target population includes families of children and youth with severe emotional disabilities, the youth themselves, two merging family organizations, mental health professionals, policy makers, and community leaders.

The TOPPS II project is designed to build upon what has been learned in the rural State of Kentucky about individual and community characteristics and substance abuse treatment, as monitored in an established Outcomes Monitoring System (OMS), the Kentucky Treatment Outcomes System (KTOS). The overall goal of this project is to examine approaches which can be used to increase the validity and reliability of KTOS follow up information. The goals are: (1) To determine the utility of enhancing data monitoring editing and feedback to rural substance abuse treatment centers in order to improve the quality, quantity and timeliness of KTOS data submission, (2) To implement and pilot test the effectiveness of a seamless local data collection approach in rural treatment centers for baseline, tracking, and follow-up data in order to provide more reliable and valid data, as well as higher rates of follow-up, and (3) To examine the effectiveness of varied intensities of client contact rates and varied intensities of client incentives in order to increase KTOS patient data collection follow up rates. Kentucky will participate actively in the consensus building process of the TOPPS II Steering Committee for decisions on and implementation of a common treatment outcomes data base which will be implemented on an inter-State basis.
